U.S. Asks Support on Computer Stand

By Don Oberdorfer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15 (WP) — The Carter administration has asked European and Japanese allies to join it in its denial of a sophisticated computer requested by Tass, State Department officials said yesterday.

So far, the officials said, there is no indication that these nations are planning to sell a computer to take the place of the one refused the Soviet Union by President Carter last month as a reprisal for the convictions of So-viet dissidents Anatoli Sheharansky and Alexander Ginsburg. The officials added that there has been no formal reply by the allied governments to the U.S. position on the Tass computer issue.

The issue is difficult for several of the countries. They do not wish to associate themselves with political restric-tions on Soviet trade, but at the same time they are reluctant to quarrel with Washington on an issue of such im-

Not Formally Cleared

In presenting its case to Britain, France. Germany and Japan, the United States acknowledged that the decision against the Tass computer had been made on foreign policy grounds. It pointed out, however, that the planned sale of the Sperry Univac computer had not received formal security clearance from Cocom, a multination coordinating group that controls the export of technology from the West to Communist countries.

Officials here and diplomats of the nations involved describe the Univac computer as a borderline case for Cocom's export-control policies

In a clear-cut case, a strong objection from any cooperating nation would be enough to block the sale to the Soviet Union of equipment or technology that has mililary or strategic importance.

At the least, the U.S. cancellation of the computer and the objections lodged with allied nations are expected to delay any sale of the machine to the Soviet Union. This is because time-consuming discussions are likely before any allied nation would feel free to go ahead with such a sale. Tass wants the computer for coverage of the 1980 Olym-

Soviet Dissident Sentenced to 5-Year Exile

From Wire Dispatches
MOSCOW, Aug. 15 — Soviet dissident Alexander Podrabinek, who compiled a book alleging that political critics of the state were subjected to enforced psychiatric treatment, was sentenced today to five years' internal exile on charges of anti-Soviet slander, dissident sources reported.

No other information was available on the trial of the 24-year-old medical orderly who had formed an investigative group studying what it alleged was the abuse of psychiatry in the Soviet Union for political purposes.

The sentence was handed down after the one-day trial in Elektrosal, an industrial town 40 miles east of Moscow. It is an area barred to foreigners, so Western correspondents were unable to attend the trial.

Israel to Press A-Plans Despite U.S. Objections

TEL AVIV. Aug. 15 (UPI) — Energy Minister Yitzhak Modai said yesterday that Israel is going ahead with preparations to build an atom-ic plant despite the lack of promised U.S. funding.

"At this point we are still hopeful that a way will be found and that eventually we'll get a plant and finance it from the United States,"

Mr. Modai denied reports on government radio and in the Yedioth Ahronoth newspaper that Israel had decided to eliminate its $4 million allocation for feasibility on the continent by "the interventionist actions of some NATO states."

The message did not name national did not name nations assistance. The United States said it provided "nonlethal" military aid for the operation.

"We need to reach temperatures nf 100 million degrees to demonreach those temperatures in the next machine, which is a larger machine than we're now operating."

He said the attainment of a 60million-degree temperature in the present Princeton machine occurred sooner than anyone expected. The advance by the Princeton scientists was announced Sunday by the Department of Energy.

"It took us seven years to go from 5 million degrees to 25 million degrees," Dr. Gottlieb said. "It has taken us six months to go the last 35 million degrees and reach the 60-million-degree mark. The results came in much better than we antici-

The most encouraging result of the Princeton achievement is that the 60-million-degree mark was reached without the hot hydrogen-deuterium gas mixture "clumping" together in swirls that would tend to cool the gas and spoil the fusion

"The invisible layers of magnetic field that confine the gas can be increased in scale in the bigger machine," Dr. Gottlieb said. "The insulation that the magnetic field provides can be steadily improved upon in the next machine."

Israel, Egypt Involved In Fighting Rural Poverty

By Lewis Diuguid

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15 (WP)

— An ianovative assault on rural poverty in member countries of the Organization of American States is being led by a Cypriot expert who has attracted Israel and Egypt as friendly competiturs in providing the technical assistance.

Projects in a dozen countries are benefiting the victims of backward rural conditions that have proved most resistant to international development efforts.

veiopment efforts.

The outlay is small. "These problems aren't solved by a lot of money," said Stahis Panagides, the Cypriot on loan to the OAS from the World Bank.

What solves the problems, he said, is a commitment by the host government and the catalyst effect of two or three experts — such as Israelis now in the field and Egyp-tians about in be — on a job where they can pass along their experience. The projects range from easing rural credit to establishing new settlements. Often the long-range objective is to train workers in such countries as Haiti and Honduras so they can prepare more costly rural development projects that can be financed by the World Bank or Inter-Ameri-

The vote was 199 to 184. Instead, by a vote of 289 to 95, it adopted a $15.7 million across-the-board cut offered by Rep. Thomas Harkin, D-lowa.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger wrote a letter to House Speaker Thomas O'Neill Jr., D-Mass, calling on Congress to reject the large cut in the international bank funds. Mr. Kissinger called the amount for the banks "the absolute minimum needed if the aid program is to support United States foreign policy and economic objectives effectively." For six international banks, the bill would appropriate $2.6 billion, a figure that reflected a $877 million cut that the Foreign Operations Sub-cemmittee had already made. Rep. Long argued that the banks were the "fat belly of foreign aid," paying high salaries to their execu-tives and granting loans that wound up in the pockets of the wealthy in poor countries. He said that the hanks were "taking money from poor people in rich countries and giving the money to rich people in poor countries." Rep. Silvio Conte. R-Mass., said that large cuts could have the "dire censequences" of leading other countries to default on their contri-hutions or of demanding that the United States give up its vein power over the loans, a vein power that has not been exercised. Rep. Obey said that the question was "whether or not we believe America ought in keep its word," adding that Mr. Carter and former President Gerald Ford had committed the United States to the contribution level. Rep. Obey also argued that for every dollar contributed in the banks, $2.60 was spent in the United States.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Aug. 15 (AP) — Local officials yesterday declared Santa Barbara County a les. It measured 5.1 on the Richter disaster area in the wake of an earthquake Sunday that injured about 60 persons and caused an estimated $4.5 million in damage.

Aftershocks, most of them too weak to be felt, continued through the day as scientists tried to pinpoint the geological fault responsible for the quake.

and that Turkey is acting in good faith to achieve a just and peaceful settlement of the Cyprus problem. That version was adopted by the House, 208 to 205, and some conferees were said to have expressed concern that any major changes made in the House language by the conference would cause rejection of the entire proposal. The embargo was imposed by Congress three years ago after Tur-key, fearful that Cyrpus was about to join Greece, invaded the island using weapons and equipment obtained from the United States. Both Turkey and Greece are members of NATO.

Prosecutors prepared the 42-page indictment after raids on the church's Los Angeles and Washington offices on July 8, 1977, in which FBI agents carted off tens of thousands of documents. The government's case is based on those documents, and the church and its attorneys have been engaged for more than a year in a struggle to get them back. Some church officials now say that their actions were illegal, and the church said recently in a statement that those indicted would surrender to the FBI rather than await

Church officials have contended that although the infiltration and purloining of government docu-ments may have been illegal, members "did so in defense against a government hureaucracy which bas consistently acted against the civil and buman rights of the church"

The fRS has for years opposed the church's tax-exempt status. In 1962, the Food and Drug Adminis-tration raided church offices, charging that the Scientologists were illegally using and promoting the benefits of their "E-Meter," which is attached to the skin as a sort of lie-detector during spiritual counseling.

The indictment charges nine members, including Mary Sue Hubbard, second-ranking official in the church's hierarchy, with one count of conspiracy to steal government documents, burglarize goverament offices, intercept oral communications and forge government passes; 10 counts of theft of government property; one count of intercepting oral communications; 10 counts of burglary and one count of conspiracy to obstruct justice, to obstruct an investigation, to harbor a fugitive and to make false declarations before a grand jury. Two other members face slightly different charges.

Navy Future at Heart of A-Carrier Issue

By Richard Burt

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15 (NYT)

— The struggle between the White House and Congress over whether to build a new $2.1 hillion nuclearpowered aircraft carrier not only reflects a deep debate over the future of the U.S. Navy, but also the changing mood on Capitol Hill toward military spending.

Following the decision in the House earlier this month to include funds for building the warship in its $119.3 billion defense appropriauons hill, the carrier issue has emerged as one of the most sensitive problems confronting the Carter administration. The administration is strongly opposed to a new ear-ner, but senior defense officials believe that it is all but inevitable that the Senate will soon act to also fund the 90,000-ton warship. Unless President Carter is willing to veto a new defense spending bill, which White House aides believe is unlikely, the administration would thus be forced to revise its plans for redesigning the role and the make-up of the U.S. fleet. These call for the Navy to place less emphasis on a dwindling number of increasingly expensive and vulnerable capital hips such as carriers, in favor of a larger fleet composed of cheaper

Many defense specialists argue that the Navy's traditional emphasis on modeling its fleet around a force of supercarriers is unsuited to an age of naval warfare in which missile-equipped Soviet aircraft and submarines pose a severe threat to large surface ships. The mounting cost of modern carriers is also said to rule out the possibility of increasing the size of the Navy's surface fleet, which has declined to fewer than 400 ships in the last dec-

Accordingly, the administration mounted an intense lobbying campaign against the new carrier durrecent congressional debates over the defense budget for fiscal 1979. So far, however, supporters the carrier concept have prevailed in both houses, and the administration's last chance to scuttle the warship comes this week when the Senate Appropriations Committee releases its views on the budget, and the military spending hill then goes to the floor for

The views of Sen. John Stennis. D-Miss., the chairman of both the Senate Armed Services Committee and Defense Appropriations Sub-committee, will be crucial to the outcome of this debate, and officials acknowledge that the White House is applying heavy pressure on him to cut the carrier out of the hudget. According to congressional aides, however, Sen. Stennis is said

A central argument used by the administration against building a new supercarrier is that the money could be better spent in beginning construction of a new class of smaller, conventionally driven ships. The smaller carriers, analysts contend, could be equipped with vertical takeoff fighters which would enable a 60,000-ton conventional carrier to possess the same firepower as an existing nuclear

Supporters of the supercarrier argue that vulnerability of the huge ship has been vastly exaggerated and that it would possess a large assortment of defensive gear that would greatly lessen the chances of a successful Soviet strike. Specialists also question the technical fea-shility of quickly developing verucal takeoff jets for a new generation of small carriers.

In addition, some Navy officers assert that in the long run nuclearpowered ships are less expensive to operate than conventional ones. They also point out that in many parts of the world, carriers provide the United States with its only means to project military power in rapidly developing crises, such as the 1973 war in the Middle East. Croatian Group Is Blamed for 2 Bombs in N.Y.C.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15 (UPf) — Dynamite bombs found at the United Nations and Grand Central Station were placed by Croatian terrorists "well-schooled" in constructing explosives, police said. Neither device exploded.

Two notes found with the bombs yesterday claimed that they were planted by the Croatian Freedom Fighters, who seek the separation of Croatia from Yugoslavia, police

The notes demanded the release of a Croatian accused of trying to kill the Yugoslavian ambassador to West Germany. Chief of Detectives James Sullivan called the group "very well-schooled bomb makers." A UN spokesman said that the bomb found on a window ledge of the Dag Hammarskjold Library was "enough to blow up the library." "The goal [of the group's action] apparently was to intervene in the government process that was taking place between Yugoslavia and West Germany," Mr. Sullivan said.

to support the earrier idea on the to have influenced the views of understanding that it would be the many on Capitol Hill, administration aides acknowledge that congressional support for the new carrier also reflects a deeper skepticism over Mr. Carter's defense policies in general. Much of this skepticism is said to flow from earlier White House decisions to cancel the B-l strategic bomber, to slow the development of a new intercontinental mobile missile and to defer production of the neutron > weapon. At the same time, the willingness of Congress to challenge Mr. Carter on the issue of carrier deployment is indicative of what some call a new consensus on Capitol Hill favoring increased defense spending. Although the administra-tion's 1979 defense spending request was the largest on record-several members said that Congress, if asked, would have approved an even larger request.

In anticipation of the conference, to be attended by 250 bisbops, a group of conservative bisbops circulated a preparatory document which redefined the church's role as being essentially evangelical.

This was in sharp contrast to the conclusion of the last such conference, in the Colombian city of Medellin in 1968, which for the irst time placed the church on the side of Latin America's poor and oppressed, and gave birth to the so-called "theology of liberation."

The preparatory document for the Puebla conference stirred such opposition in the church, including outright rejection by several national bishops conferences, that it has been formally withdrawn by the bishops and theologians who sponsored it.

ment has been prepared which will dons of human rights, but thoubecome the basis for the principal debate at Puebla. It aims to balance the political demands of progressive sectors and the evangelical emphasis of the conservatives.

"Basically the position of Medellin will now be reiterated," a progressive priest said. "We would like to have gone further, but at least it's not a reversal. And it has saved the church from being torn

The polarization between proessive and conservative sectors of the Latin American church is so great that many analysts feared the Puebla conference would serve only to formalize the political split and in effect create two Catholic churches in the bemisphere, one in favor of the status quo and the other fighting for economic and social reform and, in some cases, even

Compared to the church's traditional elitist role in Latin America, a Catholic revolution has already taken place in the decade since the Medellin conference, which many students of Latin American affairs regard as one of the region's more American republic after two priests important political events in this were murdered last year. century.

sands of priests are working closely with peasant and trade union movements in fighting for social, economic and political change. In despair, a few priests bave joined guerrilla groups.

This move leftward was provoked in part by growing aware-ness in the courch that a change in its role in society was necessary to win back adherents. In the continent with the largest number of Catholics, churches were empty and there was a marked shortage of priests.

Radicalization of the Latin American Catholic Church was stimulated by the emergence of numerous rightist regimes that showed open bostility toward priests who were directly involved with the poor.

For example, Brazil's Catholic hierarchy, today perhaps the most progressive in South America, began to adopt popular causes only after priests and nuns were jailed and tortured. Similarly, El Salvador's Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero emerged as the principal opposition voice in the tiny Central

In Nicaragua, in contrast, the country's six bishops are trying to keep up with their radical priests. The bishops recently joined the broad opposition front that de-mands the resignation of President Anastasio Somoza, whose family bas ruled since 1933.

A variable that may affect the outcome of the Puebla bishops' conference will be the political tint of the successor to the late Pope Although Pope Paul had the rep-

Some church sources are speculating that the new pope may come to Puehla in October. Even if he does not, the message that he inevi-tably will send will be studied carefully by both conservative and progressive priests for ammunition to support their positions.

cated by Mr. Vance and his associates more often than the stiffer, more militant ripostes dealt by Mr. Brzezinski and his National Security Council staff. But this does not assure an immutable pattern, both sides say in private.

Some of the more combative challenges to the Kremlin advocat-ed by the Brzezinski side, such as counteractions to checkmate Soviet-Cuban power in Africa, were blocked by obstacles beyond the reach of the White House, Mr. Carter's avoidance of them therefore did not necessarily signify the decisions he would have made if his choices had been less restricted.

As a consequence, the State Department's considerable satisfaction over the enhanced prestige and influence of Mr. Vance is mitigated by a hallmark of the Carter presidency: Where Mr. Carter has been on an issue is no guarantee of where he will go.

Mr. Brzezinski and his associates therefore are not feigning their assertion that Mr. Brzezinski has assettion that Mr. Brzezinski has not been overrun, squashed or muz-zled by the president. The compen-tion for the president's ear contin-ues in full force, senior State Department officials agree.

The president was virtually com-pelled to resolve the question of who speaks for the United States. The credibility of U.S. foreign poli-cy was disintegrating in the caco-phony of voices at the top of the administration, confounding allies as well as adversaries.

There is no illusion among senior officials at the State Department, sources there said, that the president's overriding purpose was to demonstrate control. The objective was not to boost

Cy or to put down Zbig," said a high-ranking official in a typical comment. "Nor was it a choice between 'bard' or 'soft' lines. Carter wants two strong advisers."

The State Department hopes, of course, that its "moderate approach" will prevail. Some senior insiders express confidence that it will, but others do not minimize their apprehensions about the policy struggles ahead.

An aide to Mr. Vance said bluntly: "It will be an agonizing

'Split Decision'

Mr. Carter used a form of "split decision" response last month to the demands of outraged Americans for retaliation against the trials and imprisonment of Soviet dis-sidents Anatoli Shcharansky and Alexander Ginsburg, who symbol-ized his human rights campaign.

With Congress and many of his advisers divided, Mr. Carter sent Mr. Vance to Geneva for talks on controlling nuclear arms, even though the Moscow dissident trials were timed to overlap with the SALT negotiations. After his talks with Mr. Gromyko, Mr. Vance met with Mr. Shcharansky's wife, Avi-

Mr. Carter gave a measure of sat-isfaction to his divided counselors on trade restrictions: Mr. Brzezinski's staff and several influential members of Congress, notably Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash, were pressing for sweeping restrictions on trade; Mr. Vance, Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps and Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal were vigorously opposed.

Last month Mr. Carter canceled

the sale of a large computer to Tass, the Soviet news agency, because critics protested that the equipment could be diverted to other purposes. But last week Mr. Carter authorized the sale of a disputed portion of a $144 million plant to produce oil-well drilling hits in the Soviet Union.

Decisions Forthcoming

'In the weeks ahead. Mr. Carter must make decisions on the instruc-tions for Mr. Vance in the next round of SALT talks next month. And, in preparation for the U.S. defense budget, Mr. Carter must decide on weapons systems and U.S. military strategy, some of which overlap significantly with the nuclear questions to be resolved with the Soviet Union. It has served Soviet purposes, as vell as the moderate approach inside the administration, to insulate U.S.-Soviet arms control negotiations from outside tensions.

In addition to pursuing the SAL megotiations "seriously," the Soviet Union offered a proposal in June that moved closer, U.S. officials agree, toward the Western position on mutual reduction of forces in Central Europe, although important differences remain.

Moreover, a recent U.S.-Soviet marginal progress toward a more remote goal: limitations on the sale of conventional weapons to other nations - an untouched target in the world arms race.

U.S. Tolerance Not Understood

Europe Quick to Ban Sale of Nazi Items

By Thomas Kent BRUSSELS, Aug. 15 (AP) — Official U.S. tolerance of Nazi-style demonstrations and the sale of Nazi materials is matched in few countries in Europe, where Nazi demonstrators are often liable to arrest and where the distribution of

Nazi literature can be a criminal

Only Britain, Denmark and Norway officially tolerate Nazi activi-ties, according to a survey of 11 European nations. In many countries, including several that were occupied by the Germans during World War II, national or local authorities do not recognize freedom of speech for Nazi and fascist activists.

Just flashing a fascist salute can be against the law in Italy. And in the Netherlands a publisher was blocked by law enforcement agencies last year from republishing Hitler's "Mein Kampf." In the Soviet Union, where wartine Nazi collaborators are still being round-ed up and shot, any activity that causes hostility or dissension among races, or encourages war, is punishable by jail terms of up to eight years.

Lack of Understanding

The freedom-of-speech arguments that persuaded the U.S. Supreme Court not to prevent a Nazi parade often are little understood in Europe.

"I want to put a stop to this sin-ister revival of an era f knew only too well," Mayor Gaston Defferre of Marseilles declared in June, when he banned the sale or public display of Nazi memorabilia that youths had been buying in local

"But these youngsters seem to know him only too well."

Europeans in general have long been more tolerant of consorship than Americans are. In many Euro-pean countries, books and films are routinely banned or restricted by government decree when they offend official sensibilities. In the case of Nazi displays, few European lawmakers see a reason to guarantee free speech.

In Marseilles, the city ordinance approved by Mr. Defferre reads:
"It is forbidden to put on public display or sale any uniforms, insig-nia or other objects evoking the Nazi regime . . . They constitute an offense to the memory of the victims of Nazi persecution and to the people of Marseilles who helped liberate our country."

Paris Sale Banned

Earlier this year, Nazi uniforms were on sale at the Paris flea market at prices that reportedly ranged up to 3,000 francs ($650). Germans were reported to be the leading buyers, and Paris municipal offi-cials quickly banned the sale. But on the French Riviera, recordings of Nazi songs, including the Waf-German party newspaper Neues of Nazi songs, including the Waf-fen SS song, have gone on without German party newspaper Neues Deutschland said today. interference.

The greatest tolerance of Nazistyle activities in Europe is in Britain, where Hitler-era memorabilia is freely on sale in specialist shops. Thousands of police have been mobilized to protect the freedom of speech of Britain's 11-year-old National Front, which uses parades and inflammatory literature to de-nounce nonwhite inhabitants and which assails the political left.

"This deliberate stirring up of hatred and appealing to the basest instincts in man is a despicable husiness and Christians should not tolerate it," Gerald Ellison, the hishop of London, told his diocese last September. But British govern ment officials have protected the right of Nazi-style groups to speak out as long as they do not cause breaches of the peace.

Norway and Denmark also toler- edly have circumvented the bans by wrapping their products in a histor-ical cloak. They sell their wares with toy models of World War If ate their tiny Nazi groups. "Run, you bastards, run," Ralph Bakshi shouts to the Ores he has created on 75,000 clear plastic cells. Bakshi has been a traveler in Middle Earth for 22 years now and has lived there more or less permanently for the last three. On Nov. 15, his $6 million animated version of the first half of the late J.R.R. Tolkieo's "The Lord of the Rings" will open in 20 cities. For the moment, oo four floors of a Los Angeles office building, Middle Earth is a world in transit — from Tolkien's words to Bakshi's 250,000 separate images.

When he agreed to bankroll "The Lord of the Rings." Zaentz had no idea how large or small his investment would be: "One couldn't even guess how much it would cost to film live-action battle scenes with thousands of people." now being replaced — literally frame by frame — with animation. The 164 artists Bakshi trained for the film are painters rather than animotors: "I put my ads in American Artist and the SoHo Weekly News. I chose people who would otherwise have gone into painting on canvas."

Animation Problems

Yet translating live action to animation is, in some ways, extremely difficult. "What about a thousand animated bodies? If a character walks and talks well, can be ride a horse and eat realistically? If one character rides a horse well, can nice of them? Normally, in animation, you have only two or three characters together. There are one characters in 'The Fellowship of the Ring,' all moving together.

"It is unfair that once something was solved in live action, it didn't stay solved in animation. How could I make nine animated charncters move together? Certain colors translate to animation. Others don't. The live actors move at a certain speed. That speed may be too fast or too slow for the animated characters they represent. What happens to characters when they go behind other characters? A reaction on Aragorn's face in live action wouldn't work for animation."

It is Aragorn, the King with a broken sword, who concerns Bak-shi the most, "With every other character, I had certain licenses. The hobbits are short and furry, Gandalf is a wizard with a white beard. Gollum is so totally obsessed with the Ring of Power that he's easy to draw. Dwarfs and elves do not exist where we can observe them. But, with Aragorn, I had no license. If Aragorn didn't move realistically, with weight, if he wasn't a man on the screen, the picture wouldn't work. If he isn't real,

Veterans' Pensions

The United States is getting its priorities backward in its obligations to military veterans. Congress is about to pass very large increases in pensions for those veterans with the least claim to special benefits. They are the people who were well and able-bodied when discharged from the service and, subsequently, in civilian life - for reasons unrelated to military service — have been disabled and fallen into need. Sometimes the need is real. But the most common disability is age; under the law, any veteran over 65 is presumed to be, for pension purposes, totally disabled.

Frequently, even the need is, shall we say, artificial. There is a widespread pattern of men retiring early and claiming these pensions on the ground of poverty, while their wives continue to work and to support their families in comfortable circumstances. The present law does not take family income into account. Both houses of Congress have now voted, all but unanimously, to raise these pensions at a cost that could be, next year, more than $600 million.

Here you get another glimpse of who gets what share of each dollar in veterans' benefits. In the democratic spirit, the politics of veterans' benefits is strongly influenced by numbers. A great number of World War II veterans are now getting close to retirement age. Their interests are not the same as those of the much younger people who served dur-ing the Vietnam War. Under the pressure of those numbers, Congress is about to skew the whole benefit program in favor of old-age

The right order of priorities begins with the unconditional commitment to provide care and compensation for the veterans who suffered permanent and severe injuries in military service. There is also an obligation to career soldiers - whose earned pensions, incidentally, are entirely separate from the veterans' benefits that we are describing here. Beyond that, the country has a clear duty to people as they leave the services, to help them re-establish themselves in civilian life. That duty is great initally but, in our opinion, it diminishes over the years. This principle applies as much to the cash benefits as it does to job preferences.

Veterans' pensions were established in the days before there was general protection for the elderly and the destitute. But today, of course, there is a vast structure of aid. Nearly 80 percent of the people receiving these veterans' pensions are also drawing Social Security checks. For elderly people whose Social Security is not enough to live on. Congress has now provided SSI — supplemental security income. With SSI in force, there is no need for veterans' pensions.

The national responsibility to the veteran who is destitute, through causes unrelated to his military service, is the same as to any other citizen who is destitute. The proper standard for monthly payments to either is, we believe, the SSI payments. The bill now going through Congress would raise the veterans' pensions a good deal higher. The present maximum annual payment to a single veteran is $2,364. Under the Senate bill it would go to $3,240. The House would nearly double it to around $4,000.

In defense of the two veterans' affairs committees, it needs to be said that this bill is not a simple giveaway. Both the House and Senate versions would prevent the evasion we noted earlier: the veteran who chooses not to work, but to draw a pension while living on his wife's earnings. The bill would count family income against the veteran's pension eligibility. Because of this change, in the long run, beginning around 1990, the pensions would begin to cost less under the bill than under present law. But in the meantime, the country would be paying a high price to buy out a bad practice. The bill also contains, in both versions, a number of expensive absurdities like the large additional payments to anyone over 80.

There is too much money in this bill, and there are too many veterans' benefit programs that deserve it more. The bill is now moving toward a conference. If the conference committee does not hold these pensions down close to the present SSI level, President Carter would best protect veterans' interests by recycling the bill — vetoing it, and sending it back to the committees to try again.

While the world was noting that Russian cosmonauts have broken the old American record for space endurance, a development with more relevance to every urban American was practically ignored.

The Russians have also achieved reliable garbage collection service while in space. According to Tass, the official Russian news agency, an unmanned space capsule resupplied the two orbiting Soviet cosmo-this was accomplished without a demand for a cost-of-living pay increase from the robot.

In Washington, the continuous weakness of the dollar is accepted with astonishing calmness. . [but] the consequences of a fur-ther fall could be frightening. Those coun-tries joined in the OPEC cartel will not permanently accept the fact that they are getting a steadily declining item of exchange for their product. Dollar holders all over the world will be uneasy. A kind of general flight to gold - a real value - has already set in and its price has reached record heights. If the fear spreads that the decline of the dollar will continue, that its value could sink deeper, then the point could be reached at which the process would be hard to stop.

Self-Inflicted Setback

The formal treaty between China and Japan is a setback for Soviet foreign policy and there is now little chance that Brezhnev will be able to erect the "Asian secutity system" he has long been aiming at as a means of isolating China. Whereas it was Stalin who in 1950 successfully concluded an agreement with Peking intended to limit Japanese expansion. Khrushchev broke with China and hinted at the possibility of returning the disputed Kuriles to Japan. Brezhnev repudiated the latter offer and has seemed to be determined to affront Japan. That Peking and Tokyo should have moved closer together as a result of these policies can hardly be a surprise to Moscow. Brezhnev now risks being listed by rivals as "the man who lost Japan." -From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung

BRUSSELS — Nothing more resembles a Brezhnev decorating ceremony than another Brezhnev decorating ceremony. The Soviet leader has one of the largest models of interpretable and the state of the stat collections of international medals north of Idi Amin. However, the latest award session, when Mr. Bre-zhnev received the Order of Kli-Gottwald, Czechoslovakia's highest decoration, was anything

It had been preceded by another ceremooy, during which Mr. Brezhnev awarded the Order of the October Revolution to the Czech party leader, Gustav Husak, and the Order of Lenin to Vasil Bilak, the No. 2 man in the Czech hierarchy—thus placating the two principal rivals among Czechoslovakia's top

Furthermore, while this threecornered ceremony took place io June, the significance of this display of mutual cootentment was meant to be felt only oow. The three protagonists of the night of Aug. 29, 1968, were celebrating the 10th anniversary of their exploit two mooths in advance. It was oo that date 10 years ago that Soviet troops, aided by those of Poland, Hungary, Bulgaria and East Germany, put an end to the Prague tempt to give a human face to Communism — under the pretext of saving the country from the threat of a West Germany invasion.

A Significance

Each medal awarded in June also had a personal and political signifi-cance of its own. Mr. Bilak received his trinket because in 10 years he has never changed his mind. He still boasts of being the only one, or at least one of the very few, Czechoslovak personalities (he is, however, of Ukrainian origin) to the people of Czechoslovakia have have called for the Soviet Union's not forgotten the springtime of Praintervention Aug. 20, 1968, to do gue. away with the regime of Alexander

Dubcek. On the other hand, Mr. Husak received his bauble because be did change his mind,

After having time and again de-clared that "not one Czechoslovak citizen ever asked for the intervention of Soviet soldiers," Mr. Husak took on a new line and from the day be succeeded Mr. Dubeck as chief of the Communist Party, was swearing up and down the country that there had been "innumerable requests from Czecboslovak Communists and patriots for help in de-fending the holy cause of social-

As for Mr. Brezhnev, he accepted and gave out the awards to show his full satisfaction with the situation as it is. His doctrine of limited sovereignty, that is, the right of the Soviet Union to intervene in the internal politics of Communist countries, has been reaffirmed by its principal victims — 10 years after its most spectacular demonstration. In addition, by awarding his medals, Mr. Brezhnev cut short certain rumors (and a number of plots) concerning a change of re-gime in Prague to the detriment of Mr. Husak and to the advantage of Mr. Bilak.

Indeed, Mr. Brezhnev has learned from history: Ten years ago he refused to support Antonin Novotny, who was then the chief of the Czechoslovak party, thus making room for his successor. Alexander Dubcek.

Arrests Made

The June festivities were not the only item on the anniversary calendar. Prague has been prepared for the event just as it was in June, for the visit of Mr. Brezhnev, hy a thorough screening of anyone potentially bothersome. A special vigilante squad was set up by the police, a number of dissidents were arrested and others were warned not to demonstrate their feelings about the incidents of 10 years ago.

As a symbol of some sort of con-violent propaganda campaign, nat-urally went along with all the precautionary police measures.

Under this spiritual eleaning campaign new arguments have been found to explain the events of 10 years ago. The alibi of "fraternal assistance" in the face of a hostile West Germany is oow greeted with only incredulity. For the Slovak leader Josef Lenart, the Soviel intercention "grand the country for terventioo "saved the country from a bloodbath and a civil war." For the official party newspaper, Rude Pravo, the invasion prevented a genocide, as the leaders of the party in 1968 bad "decided to set up coocentratioo camps" where they would nave put real Communists while they established a Hitlerian type dictatorship in Czechoslovakia. The very need to seek such improbable excuses for the invasion, 10 years after it took place, is am-ple evidence that what is known here as the oormalization, that is, the attempt to make Czechoslovakia a vassal state, has oot been a success.

Despite the 150,000 Czechs who have sought freedom in exile and the 500,000 who have been expelled from the party, despite the thou-sands of intellectuals forced out of their jobs and the transformation of the country into - as the French Communist poet Aragon calls it — a "spiritual Biafra," despite the incessant persecution of all nonconformists and despite the shame of denunciation being made a national virtue, despite all that and more, the people of Czechoslovakia have

In ooe of his more bitter moods, Bertolt Brecht, the German playwright, who took steps toward Communism and hurried back, once suggested to political leaders: "If the people do not agree with you, just get rid of the people." The leaders of Prague have tried just that, and failed. The people of Czechoslovakia wili noi agree to be done away with.

The situation in Prague, 10 years after, therefore leads to two conclusions. First, Communism and democracy are not compatible. The invasion of 1968 accelerated the degradation of the international Communist movement; the process is not completed, but the credibility of any Communist party today de-pends primarily if not exclusively on the distance that separates it from Moscow as measured from Prague.

Detente

Furthermore, if the Soviet Union continues to refuse to apply the principle of detente with other socialist countries, and if it is not the Helsinki agreement but that of Yalta which is symbolic of its attitude within the Eastern bloc, Prague 1978 is a clear demonstration of the fact that no amount of repression can crush the spirit of a people that

Looking back we see it as a creative movement that led Britain (after two revolutions) out of the feudal past and into the modern era of constitutional democracy and free enterprise in 1688. America's history since that awakening can aptly be described as a continuous milenarian movement, and all of our awakenings represent successive ef-forts to overcome obstacles that hinder our effort to establish the Kingdom of God on earth as it is in heaven. Being millennialists, we Americans take their ideals serious-

At midpoint in our fourth awakening, it is difficult to predict precisely what will come out of it, hut a fundamental ideological reorientation is taking place in our self-understanding.
The initial period of disorientation and reaction, which began in the 1960s, will give way to a oew consensus from which we can elect leaders prepared to carry out the restructured general will and apply new measures of social justice. Gradually we will evolve a new understanding of the meaning of America's mission and come to grips with the problems that hinder

A religious awakening is oot simply a series of mass revival meetings led by charismatic evangelists. Nor can it be defined in terms of statistical increases in church attendance or church membership.

A religious awakening takes at least 30 years to work its way

The meaning of this fourth awakening does not lie in the reactionary messages of Billy Graham, Sun Myung Moon, charismatic Catholicism. Hasidism. Scientology, est or the Jarvisites. The culture's mil-lenarian thrust ultimately favors the reformers over the reactionar-

As a historian I am reluctant to make predictions, but I think the key to this fourth awakening lies in the alternative styles of life, epistemologies, rituals and symbols of the course, when support by for temologies, rituals and symbols of the young — their sympathy for Oriental philosophies, their sexual egalitarianism, their hunger for crafismanship, their participatory communalism, their opposition to adulterated food, their concern for whales, and their lack of concern need to be restructured if we are to survive and thrive.

The same happened in our first great religious awakening (1730-1760), when we threw off our colonial swaddling clothes and assumed our rightful place among the nations of the world — the foremost exponents of a republican ideology and the separation of church and state

In our second great awakening (1800-1830), we became convinced that the common man should take control of his "manifest destiny," and (after removing the Indians and conquering the Mexicans) we fought a civil war to end slavery so that God's truth could go marching

Our third religious awakening (1890-1920), led us into two world wars to make the world safe for democracy, and innugurated the comprehensive reforms of the New Deal and Fair Deal era.

Since 1960 we bave been undergoing a similar cultural reorienta-tion and now, as the traditionalists fade and the bizarre cults lose their appeal, we begin the more difficult task of reformulating our millenni-

This awakening, like the rest, is a time of immense creativity and spontaneity in all ranks of society. When those two sets of rights come into conflict, the fiindictment of Dr. Mario Jascalevnal word as to which prevails falls, under the U.S. system, to the judiciary. Exhibit A in that regard is a Sn-

Attorneys for Dr. Jascalevich subpoenaed Mr. Farber's private notes on the ground that the material was absolutely essential to preparing their client's defense. Farber and The Times refused to booor the subpoena. They are that the subpoena. They argue that turning over the notes wholesale compromised sources in ways that restricted the future flow of infor-mation, and thus violated First Amendment protections.

Confrontation Forced A compromise probably could have been struck if the trial judge, William Arnold, had made the defense stipulate the particular materials that it regarded as critical to the case. Instead, Judge Arnold forced a confrontation.

He ordered Farber and The Times to turn over all the notes to him so it could be determined whether they were pertinent. When The Times and Farber again refused to make a blanket disclosure, they were cited for contempt. The paper and the reporter then moved to stay the contempt judg-ment in numerous appeals to other courts in New Jersey, where the deaths took place; in New York, where Farber lives, and in the U. S.

In the course of the appeals against the contempt decision, moreover, there was added a new element. It developed that Farber has a lucrative contract to do a book on the case. In other words, there is at stake an entrepreneurial element, a profit motive.

None of this gainsays the impor-tance of a free press to the demo-cratic government. The unimpaired flow of ideas is absolutely essential if citizens are to make the decisions our system demands of them. But precisely because the First Amendment is so precious, just because it is central to the workings of our system, it ought not to be invoked in doubtful — not to mention los-ing — cases. That means in cases where the rights of the press bave to be weighed against the rights of a defendant, where journalistic enterprise sets up as more important to freedom than an independent judiciary, and where, as is out unu-sually the fact these days, such enterprise is married to Mammon.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15 (Reuters)

— Beset by profit taking and dollar weakness, prices on the New York Stock Exchange retreated today in the slowest trading in three weeks before a late firming trend tempered the losses.

The Dow Jones industrial average was nff 1.04 points to 887.13.

Advances trailed declines 566 to 919. Volume was down to 29.76 million sbares from 32.32 million yesterday. Analysts said stocks were overextended after their recent price gains. Late firmness may have been associated with a late dollar recovery in Europe, they said. Some caution may also have been related to the Federal Reserves Open Market Committee meeting today, analysts said, although some did not expect any change in monetary policy.

Mr. Oppenheimer. Best approach is through economic growth accelerated by overseas investment.

at March 31 1978

Points from the statement by the Chairman, Mr. H. F. Oppenheimer

Massive unamployment or under-employment will not be avoided and social stability will be at risk unless the South African economy can resume a repld rate of growth. The material and human resources for growth on an adequate scale are cortainly there but they cannot be turned to account uniess the necessary investment capital is mado evailabla. This cannot be found in full from local sources and the country's greatest need le therefore a renawed inflow of invostment funds on a large scale from overseas.

It is just because our prosperity and stability are at this Juncture so dependent on investment from abroad that many individuals and groups who disapprove of the country's official race policy believe that an economic boycott – if it could be made effective – would lorce South Africe to change that policy radically.

Economic Growth

Il e boycoft did in the long run produce change it could only be violent change induced by the sufferings that if would have inflicted on black people. It is difficult to believe that any end inilitied on black people. It is difficult to believe that any end could justify such means, and particularly so when the opposite policy of othnulating economic growth must bring about major improvements in the opportunities, conditions of employment and wagas of the black workers. Such developments would almost certainly slee leed to the mora rapid elimination of racial discrimination, particularly in tha highly sensitive aroes of education, sacurity of tenure, and in regard to the hersh restrictions that exist on the movement of black workers.

Industrial Ralations

This whole field is now under concideration by the Wiehehn commission whose report is expected later this year. One of the most important questions with which the commission must be concarned in that of blacktrade unionism. Trade unions are an Integral part of the Iree enterprice system in South Airica and throughout tha West. Those of us who are committed to the extansion of this aystem should see tha inclusion of black workers in tha trade union movament as a hazithy and desirable development.

We have made further progress in Implamanting the Group's policy of improving the earnings, living conditions and productivity of our black employees. Our similathe elimination of race as a lactor in datermining wages and other conditions and employment.

In our desire to achieve a more stable labour lorce we are plenning to reduce the proportion of migrants by providing more of our senior workers – as we are now permitted to – with lamily accommodation in mine villages or nearby townships. Indeed major housing programmes are in hand for all tha Group's minee, and good progress le being made.

EUROPE'S FINEST JEWELLERS HAVE SOMETHING VERY SPECIAL IN COMMON

In his Annual Statement to Shareholders Sir David Nicolson, Chairman of Rothmans International Limited, made the following points: -

- * Profits in the financial year to March 31, 1978 reach a new record at £80.6 million before tax - an increase of 21%.
- * Ordinary dividends total 2.0566p per share, the maximum increase allowed. Company intends to take full advantage of new legislation embodying some relaxation for companies demonstrating earnings growth.
- * Earnings per share at 22.4p are virtually the same (22.2p) after adjusting for inflation on a current cost accounting basis.
- * Export operations particularly successful consolidating the Group's position as one of Europe's foremost cigarette exporters generating large foreign currency earnings, especially in Britain where the value was almost £170 million.
- * Proposed acquisition of Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd. a logical extension of geographical coverage adding a successful tobacco operation and a measure of proven diversification.

WHO STANDS ACCUSED?

Israel Answers Its Critics. By Chaim Herzog, Random House, 277 pp. $10.

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

BY AND large, reading a collec-tion of United Nations speeches by the chief delegate of a country to that body is an act of self-immolation. That this is not true of Chaim Herzog's gathering of his speeches is for a number of reasons. Foremost, of course, is that the Middle East, with Israel as one of its focuses, is high in the consciousness of politically aware

Then, the constitution of the small state in 1948, its subsequent history, including the four wars it fought in 30 years, provides a dramatic chapter in the history of the Middle East. Although a small Middle East. Although a small nation, Israel bas received the attention accorded only the mightiest powers. Thus what Ambassador Herzog has to say is part of that unepding, passionate debate in which we are all, willy-nilly, participant or spectator.

The speeches are masterly expositions of his views: lucid, comprehensible, meaty. There are no grace notes, humor or anecdotes. Nothing distracts him from the matter at hand. The arguments are marshaled with a lawyer's skill. Of course, they represent the official and personal views of the author. In that regard, "Who Stands Accused?" is a partisan document. Nevertheless, even those who don't agree with him will find the material absorbing, even if only as a target for attack.

Moreover, Herzog blends the of-ficial and personal in a singular mixture. He is not the kind of func-tionary who translates into official language his country's position. His view of the new state and its history is comparable to a geologist's view of the strata of the earth. Israel's past and present history is one long interplay between the people and the land. Jerusalem lives for him as much as the kingdom established by King David as it does as a divided city recently made whole. So, too, Hebron is not merely an occupied town on the West Bank, but the place where Abraham buried his dead in olden times. But there is more. Herzog's own experiences are woven into the texts in ways not expected in offi-cial speeches. When he speaks of the way part of Jerusalem was treated when it was under Jordanian sovereignty, be mentions dese-cration of the graves and destruc-tion of the tombstones of his grand-parents who had been buried on Mount of Olive. And the history of Hebron that he recounts includes the killing of a member of his family in the fighting between Arabs and Jews in 1929.

"Who Stands Accused?" is not, however, a personal book. The speeches deal with such matters as the current situation and eventual fate of the West Bank and the Gaza strip; the new settlements in the oc-cupied territories; the Entebbe raid and the responsibility of Uganda in the episode; the role of the Pales-tine Liberation Organization, and especially the failure of the United Nations as a forum for peace in the world.

Herzog points out that Israel's stand in regard to the PLO derives not from what its spokesmen say to Western correspondents or the Western press but what the say to their own people and what they do.
The killing of schoolchildren at

Solution to Previous Puzzle

Ma'alot weighs more heavily with him than nebulous promises to reporters. When a spokesman remarks that "this Zionist ghetto of Israel must be destroyed," or when Yasser Arafat foresees a fifth war, Herzog finds it impossible to be-lieve that the PLO plans to estab-lish a secular democratic state in what is now Israel. If the Arabs feel that way, wby haven't they already established such a state, be asks. He points to the bloody rivalries within the Arab camp; the ousting of the PLO from Jordan; the sav-age fighting to Lebanon.

He counters the argument that Israel's reluctance to move back to the pre-1967 borders is an obstacle to peace by remarking that the Arabs were at those borders for 19 years after 1948 and there was no peace. Why would a unilateral move by Israel provide such a peace today?

His harshest words are directed at the United Nations and at the way the organization has been made a cat's-paw of an irresponsible majority in the General Assem-bly. No matter what the issue, be charges, it will eventually be reduced to a condemnation of Israel.

Other charges of cruelty and oppression come before the body, from Cambodia to the Kurds, but only an alleged violation of the United Nations charter by Israel exercises the ire of the delegates, he says.

Herzog's book is one on which a person can hone his own thinking. No one will agree with all of it.

On the diagramed deal, North's hand created big problems when West opened the bidding with one diamond. Four spades or four hearts would have proved unmanageable. Three no-trump had a better chance. Seeing all four hands, the reader may care to decide whether he would prefer to play or defend that contract.

North's takeout double forced South to bid two clubs, and two hearts would now have been an underbid. Instead, North made a cue-bid of two diamonds and followed with three bearts. This showed a massive hand and was forcing, so South continued, albeit reluctantly, to three po-trump.

West led the ace, king and jack of diamonds, driving ont the queen. A heart was thrown from the dummy. In view of West's opening bid, it was tempting for South to assume that West held the spade king and would lead the spade ten for a finesse. This would bave led to defeat, for East would have won with the king, leaving declarer a trick sbort.

South found a sure way to bring home nine tricks by taking a heart finesse. When this succeeded, he was able to take the spade finesse, and if it had failed he would still have bad an entry to his hand to try the spade finesse. This insured nine tricks even in the most unlikely event that East beld both missing hoppies in the major suits.

Even seeing all four hands, it is very difficult to defeat the game if South plays well. But it can be done. West should lead his singletoo club jack, which is won in dummy. South does best to lead the spade queen, which East allows to win. South continues with the jack, and East wins and plays the diamond nine. This wins and he cannot be the continue of t mond nine. This wins, and be reverts to clubs, removing a vital entry from the dummy.

South uses his spade ten as an entry to take a heart finesse, but West administers the coup de gras by covering with the beart queen, leaving South with no way to score more than two beart tricks. NORTH

Brewers Hold Fans High Above the Dust of the Yankee Fuss

By Roger Kahn

NEW YORK, Aug. 15 (NYT) — The psychodramas of the Bronx are ending. Hours, even days, pass between tantrums. At last it is possible to visit Yankee Stadium without feeliog that you have stumbled into the last act of Macbeth.

"We have a nice team." Allan (Bud) Selig, the president of the Milwaukee Brewers said recently as his hall club jousted in the Bronx, "What happened in Milwaukee in 1965, the Braves deserting for Atlanta, was tragic and shoddy and immoral. The new Milwaukee club had to be a smooth-running franchise. But a few seasons after

The history of this baseball sea-son will not fit into standard reference works. This is the year Bob Lemon was fired in South Chicago and hired in the South Bronx. It is the year that Billy Martin was dismissed in New York but reappointed to manage in — what did Steinbrenner say? 1984? It was the year men like Hisle and Bando rewarded the ravaged fans of Milwaukee, who had been robbed of Henry Aaron long ago.

Perennial Champ Eats to Lift

By James Tuite

NEW YORK, Aug. 15 (NYT) — The Big Man uttered a Soviet version of "yech" and grumbled, "This caviar is not so good as at home."

The chair in the Promenade Cafe of Rockefeller Center strained under his 325 pounds as be went on: But I really don't like to eat. I get sick when I think of food." He then proceeded to devour, in addition to the caviar, the following: Salmon on Russian pumpernick-el; shrimp in pastry shells; ron-delles of liver pate; beet and onion salad; vichyssoise; several helpings of roast beef with sauce bernaise; boneless squab with Russian fruit dressing: grape leaves stuffed with lamb and rice; parshed potatoes; baklava and fresh strawberries.

That was lunch. "I eat," he explained through an interpreter. "because it is necessary for my sport. But I nearly throw up evey time I think of eating."
Vasiliy Alexeev moved among the noontime throng sitting be-neath multicolored umbrellas in the sun-splashed Promenade attracting scant notice. He looked like a Brooklyn furniture mover on his day off. His buge belly looped precariously over his sagging trousers.

Bored Champion

The 6-foot bebemoth in golf cap, T-shirt and sneakers hardly looked like the Soviet Union's most celebrated athlete, the perennial world super heavyweight champion of weightlifting. He had just arrived from that other bastion of capitalism. Las Vegas, where he had Example? raised a total of 90912 pounds. Britain Continues Its Charade

By Rob Hughes

LONDON, Aug. 15 (IHT) - The trouble with socrer players these days is that they want to be feted like gods, paid like supersiars, and protected like trade unionists. They want to move around the world like sporting satellites, and yet to have no man squat on their patch back And the trouble with administrators, particularly those as insular as the British, is that they feel so threatened by all this modern glo-betrotting they seek to bury the game in the past. What stirs such heavy thoughts? The continuing charade which ber-alds the start, this Saturday, of English soccer. Government continues to sit where it plonked itself a fortnight ago: In a no-man's land of granting work permits to three Argentines — Osvaldo Ardiles and Ricardo Villa now of Tottenham Hotspur and Alejandro Sabella of Sheffield United — and banning, at least temporarily, the other non-Common Market players who are being pursued by English clubs.

Against the chaotic background, the government is trying to gather the thoughts of British sports administrators. Its work cannot have been assisted by the statement of Alan Hardaker, general secre-tary of the English football league, who gloomily predicts that "in 10 years' time, the only people win-ning championships in Western Eu-rope will be the Iron Curtain Hardaker, who is past retirement age but still has an agile mind capa-ble of hamboozling most soccer administrators in Britain, makes the claim that the breaking down of barriers will kill international soccer in the West. Yet, a couple of years ago, the same Hardaker fought tooth and nail to prevent English league players from erossing the Atlantic to the embryonic North American Soccer League.

What he would like, but none of us can have, is a time switch to throw the modern age, with its new values, its mercenary sport, back into the age when soccer players were uncomplicated animals who performed for a low maximum wage, whose love of the game was such that they would indeed have turned out for nothing — ot "nowt" in the language of Hardaker. Not many of us bave spotted many of that type of soccer players in recent years. 300 Released

But there are two things which, in Britain at least, should most worry the players: First that the economic state of the game at home is such that, although over 5 million has been splashed on transfers this summer, up to 300 players have been pruned from the 2,000 employed by the 92 league clubs. And second, that there are signs that the inflated summer employment for British players in the United States might well be disappearing.

It must always have been obvious to those with ability in their heads as well as their feet that America, like Africa and Arabia, would ultimately reject imported players and managers for home-grown products ooce they had reached sufficient standards and now, in a "private" squabble that was thrown up in n Sunday news-paper "exclusive" last weekend, we the first public demonstration of this trend.

Tommy Smith, the hardman of Liverpool's double European Cup championship side, has returned home bitter and disillusioned from the Los Angeles Aztecs. In the news of the world, he says (for money, would you believe) that franchise owners are interfering ignoramuses out for a quick buck, slave trading the poor players with their knowledge and slow to out their knowledge, and slow to honor their wage bills.

Coin's Other Side

We will doubtless hear a different story when the likes of Trevor Francis, whose term in the United States has been successful, return home. Meanwhile, of course, America has its answer to Tommy Smith: It is, from Los Angeles di-rector Peter Short, that: "British players are lazy: they're not pre-pared to work." Even from this distance, those words ring horribly true. Some of us have long been convinced that one reason for the decline of English international soccer is that, whereas players will obediently un-dergo two bours a day of physical preparation, few of them voluntarily put in any overtime on the techical aspects of the game. But then, by whose dictionary do we define work? Spurs were surprised when Ardiles and Villa arrived from Buenos Aires recently

2-Way Exchange Sbon says he didn't sign them others did. He goes further, claiming British players lack social graces and "don't know bow to peans automatically dwindle, and were "not physically fit by British standards." They were then surprised again when, admittedly in

Brown. - The main reason the Los Angeles Rams fired George Allen was Aware that Allen's discharge Sunday by the Redskins stemmed from his free-wheeling deals as vice president and general manager as well as coach, the Rams stipulated when they hired him last Feb. 1 that his duties were restricted to coaching.

An irony of his downfall in Los Angeles, in light of the criticism of the Redskins over the deal, was the displeasure by some in the Ram front office over the trade he advocated for kick returner-defensive back Eddie Brown.

Sources said that the trade of Brown prompted the Ram front office to intensify their monitoring of Allen's off-field activities. Unlike his situation in Washington, where Allen called all the shots on and off the field, his role in acquiring players was to be secondary to owner Carroll Rosenhloom and Rosenbloom's son Steve. Allen said vesterday that he bent over backward in an effort to get aloog with the Ram front-office staff. He admitted he was persistent in pushing for belp in certain areas, including seeking quarterback Billy Kilmer. One source said that a kick returner of Brown's caliber usually brings a No.-2 draft choice, noting the Rams reportedly were unwilling to give up much more than that for Kilmer.

The Rams gave up two offensive linemen, Donnie Hickman and Jeff Williams (who left the Redskin camp yesterday), a No.-3 draft choice next year and Nos. 2 and 5 for 1980. The Rams, who value high draft choices, reportedly will friendly matches. Ardiles at least displayed such nimbleness of thought and touch he scarcely needed to charge around like a rhino to keep up.

Perhaps the answer to Peter Short — who is a British immigrant, by the way — is that if you buy British then you should know what to expect. Aztecs finished at the bottom of their division and got rid of nine British players — among them George Best, Charlie Cooke and Ron Davies, internationals beyond their prime.

and wasn't with the Aztecs when conduct themselves in public." The crux of that problem is, of course, that U.S. soccer will not come of age or settle down until U.S. boys graduate to fill up the teams. That process, we know, is maturing, and year by year the places for Euro-

Before the Americanization of soccer is complete, bowever, Europe, and England in particular, can expect an outgoing as well as incoming trade. Home is not so much where you find it, young man, as where you are accepted.

money that belonged to owners, or with draft choices from a club he might be leaving."
Don Klosterman, executive vice president and general manager of the Rams, reportedly was not in favor of the trade for Brown and told Rosenbloom that Allen had been hired as coach only and had promised not to interfere with the But Allen convinced Rosenbloom to make the transaction. As the tension mounted at Los Angeles, conflicts reportedly developed between the assistants Allen brought in and the ones he retained from the staff of predecessor Chuck Knox. Ram players, accustomed to 31/2 hours of practice spread over two workouts a day under Knox, complained about practices conducted by Allen - 21/2 hours in the morning and three more hours in the afternoon. "They were used to win-ning without that kind of work," Allen said. "They were spoiled." Then came the boos at the preseason game in Los Angeles Saturday night against San Diego. The Rams lost, 17-0. Some of the fans were said to be sullen beforehand because of the projected move to

The thinking is that the two straight exhibition losses would not have been a factor — the Rams were 1-5 in preseason play last year but, with the other problems, they served as a catalyst.

Bargain Hunters: Beware of the Guaranteed 'Stolen' Watch

Jeffrey Robinson

VENTIMIGLIA, Italy (IHT) — "Pssst, wanna buy a hot watch?"
This one is a tall, thin, dark-haired, sun-glassed, pasty-faced man, the kind of character who looks as if he stepped out of a Dashiell Hammett novel, and he wanders through the Friday morning market, spotting tourists, saying, "Pssst, wanna buy a bot

If you answer no, or if you do not speak English, pasty face smiles and walks away. If you are interested — and what kind of a bargainhunter could refuse such a deal — he motions you aside with a nod and tells you in heavily accented English that he has a cousin who lives in Trenton. Then he rolls up his sleeves to show you a dozen watches. After you study them, he opens his jacket; dangling from the lining are four dozen more.

"Rolex, Cartier, Piaget, Beaume and Mercier," he reels off with a wink. "Very good prices. Stolen. Shhhh. $100." You hesitate. "All right, $75." He pats your shoulder. "Where you from? Los Angeles? I have a cousin who lives there, too. Fifty dollars $40... How much you give me?" Say anything between $20 and $30 and it's yours. "Guaranteed to be stolen," he assures you. "The real thing, Guaranteed."

One Guarantee

Guaranteed to be stolen? No. Guaranteed to work at least a week? No. The only thing to be sure of is that if should you be at the market the following week, the man with the cousins in Trenton and Los Angeles would not.

"This has been going on for a couple of years now." said Yves Piaget, who runs the watch company bearing his family's name, and who finds himself more coocerned about with this problem than he cares to be. "It's the Piaget name that's iovolved and oot actually Piaget watches because the watches sold on the black market are not stolen at all. They're copies. Phonies.'

Rumored to be manufactured in the Milan area, the phony watches — these bogus Piagets, Cartiers, Rolex's, Beaumes and Merciers — do contain Swiss movements, But. Piaget said, "Aoybody can huy Swiss-made watch movements. Switzerland makes 80 to 100 million watches and movements a year. All shapes, sizes, colors and qualities. We manufacture mir own. They're very thin and very expensive. But anybody can contact a johber and buy very cheap movements. They won't be as thin as ours, but they are watch movements and they are made in Switzerland."

So someone buys a trainful of Swiss movements, briogs them to Italy and huilds cases around them — cases with the oame Piaget or Cartier or Rolex or Baume and Mercier stamped on them. The forgers imitate the watch face, the copyrighted trademark and the band. They sometimes print copies of the guarantee forms.

Anyone looking closely can, however, spot the differences. The phony Piagets, for instance, are much thicker than the real ones because of the cheaper movements. It is a little more difficult to detect a phony Rolex because the genuioe one is a thick watch. The clue is the stem. The stems on all the phony watches tend to be the same, triangular, gold at the base, a dark stone at the tip.

"But there's another difference," Piaget added. "The phony won't work for very long. A real Piaget takes somewhere around 300 bours to put together. The phonies are assembled in under 60 minutes. A riaget electronic quartz watch sells in the States for about $9,000. You can wear it for a lifetime, pass it ooto your children and they can wear it for their lifetime, too. The phonies cost $20 to $30 on the black market, and only a third of that to make. How loog could you expect it to run?"

Yves Piaget says that when he started seeing copies of his watches, his first feeling was one of disappointment. He estimates that fewer than 5,000 copies of Piaget watches are made each year, but the figure could be double for Cartier of Rolex.

The Italian manufacturers also ship these phonies to Rio de Janiero. Buenos Aires and Caracas, and one source estimates that they account for more than 10 percent of the South American market.

An Annoyance

There is not much anyone can do legally to stop the counterfeiters. They are difficult to track down because they are always on the move. The European watch marketers consider the frauds to be little more than an annoyance. And Europeans, Piaget says, tend to be more aware; they know that a genuine Piaget cannot be bought for $20. U.S. tourists, however, are more susceptible. They run into trouble when they return to the United States and must go through customs and declare its value. By that time, though, there is a good chance that the phony watch will not be working.

"It's a nuisance," Piaget said. "Yet people who know our watches are oot likely to huy one off the street. We have a watch that retails for $50,000. It's the most expensive watch in the world and we sell a dozen or two every year. Do you think someooe who huys a watch like that, or someooe who buys a Rolls-Royce is likely to huy anything at all off the street?"

No. oot likely. Most of his customers do have other methods of hargaining persuasion. Peter Sellers, for example, ooce saw oo oval watch with a lapus-lazuli face on Yves Piaget's wrist. He liked it, said he wanted that very one, and insisted until Piaget sold it to him. When Gina Lollabrigida was in Cuba, Plaget said, President Fidel Castro admired ber Plaget watch and asked for it. She refused, Castro insisted. She finally gave in, thinking he was huying it. Castro took it, told her he was buying it, but never bothered to pay for it.
